

The Courier,

A NEW PAPER.

This Publication, of which the principles have been sufficiently explained in the Prospectus, will commence on the 22d Sept. and continue EVERY EVENING—Price Four-pence.

THE advantages which accrue from an Evening Publication, immediately after the arrival of all the Foreign Mails, will belong to THE COURIER in common with others; but the Proprietors trust that it will have recommendations peculiarly its own; and particularly that the Events upon the Continent, will be related without that ignorance which obscures, or that party bias which gives a false colouring to every Transaction. Its Principle will be INDEPENDENCE—its Object TRUTH.

It is the intention of the Proprietors to publish this Paper twice a day, in order that the best and earliest use may be derived from their extensive Foreign and Domestic communications; but the Morning Publication is, for a few weeks, deferred. The Evening Publication will be at such an hour, as to include every Mail that comes into London, in the morning, and to be included in every one, that goes out of London, at night.

In England rejecting the exploded distinctions of Whig and Tory, as to French Politics, neither Democrat nor Aristocrat, uninfluenced by Jacobin, Monarchist, or any other faction, THE COURIER will not exclude opinions on any side, that are offered with ingenuity, tinctured with wit, or enforced with argument. The facts, that may be related, will be founded on truth, and will spring from the most authentic sources of information. In the Country, more especially, a Newspaper, conducted on these principles, has long been wanted. In the Metropolis, access may readily be had to the journals of the different parties; and by collating them the reader may extract the truth, with pains little inferior to a chymical process, from the several varying and contradictory accounts, just in the same manner as, according to Lord Bolingbroke's expression, one strikes out light by the collision of flint and steel; but those who, like thousands of the Country readers, see only one Paper, must content themselves with just that kind and degree of information, which tends to serve the purposes, and to promote the views of some particular faction: for what London Paper, worth being seen, has not TAKEN ITS SIDE? This is so avowed, that the only merit which the best arrogates, is, the NOT HAVING CHANGED IT!

Fully aware of the SUPERIOR EXCELLENCE, which, in order to ensure success, competition renders necessary in an undertaking of this nature, the Proprietors have not been inattentive to call in every collateral Aid, and to use every Embellishment of which it is susceptible. Among these, they need not promise that the printing of THE COURIER shall excel all others, when they offer this slip as a specimen of the PAPER and the TYPE.

THE COURIER will be franked to all parts of Great Britain, by applying to the Clerks of their respective Roads at the General Post-Office in Lombard-street.

ADVERTISEMENTS, &c. taken in at the COURIER OFFICE, No. 38, Charing-Cross.

London, Sept. 22, 1792.